

In the ongoing fight with old world content industries, the most essential rights and interests in a free society are those of the public. Free citizens are not mere consumers; they are not a separate group from so-called "professionals."

The stakeholders in a truly just information policy in a free society are the public, not those who would reserve special rights to control public uses of information technology.

Stop the broadcast flag -- preserve the right of free citizens to own effective tools for employing digital content in useful ways.
